Therese Webb to lead Adams Harris in Atlanta

Atlanta, GA (October 20, 2010) – The Board of Directors at Adams Harris have recently announced Therese Webb as Managing Director of the Atlanta office.

Webb has 27 years of progressive experience in financial and consulting management, including managing finance operations, corporate governance, merger and acquisition integration, system implementation, business process improvement, and project management. Prior to joining Adams Harris, Webb held leadership roles as Director of Practices at Accretive Solutions and as Managing Director of Parson Consulting LLC. Additionally, Webb spent over 12 years as a Controller/Finance Director in industries including manufacturing, consumer products, technology services and health care. She began her career with Arthur Andersen in Chicago.

“Therese’s passion for the business, enthusiastic personality and solid delivery capabilities are a great asset for Adams Harris,” said Rob Dennison, CEO and Co-Founder of Adams Harris. “She has proven success in launching consulting practices and has experience in our space. Therese’s contributions and leadership will take our great team of professionals in Atlanta to the next level.”

Webb is a member of the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants, Georgia Society of CPAs (GSCPA), and Institute of Internal Auditors. She is a graduate of the University of Illinois, Champaign-Urbana with a degree in accountancy. Webb is also a Certified Public Accountant.

“Adams Harris has adopted a proven model to deliver tailored, value-added solutions to clients with a commitment to quality,” said Webb. “I am excited to lead the Atlanta office.”
