Tyler joins Adams Harris as Managing Director in Houston

September 25, 2006 (Chicago, IL) – Adams Harris, Inc., the recently formed internal audit, accounting, tax and technology risk management services firm headquartered in Chicago, announced today that Tracy Tyler has joined the firm to lead its Houston office.

“We are very pleased that Tracy has joined our leadership team,” said Mike Harris, co-founder and CEO of Adams Harris. “She brings us a strong technical background combined with great client service experience and proven leadership skills.”

Tyler, 34, joins Adams Harris from Siegfried Resources where she managed the Houston office. She has worked in senior financial management positions in technology and energy related companies and started her career in the audit division of PricewaterhouseCoopers in Houston. Tyler, a CPA, holds a BBA and an MS in Accounting from Texas A&M University. She is a lifelong resident of Houston.

“I have always been dedicated to ensuring my clients receive the highest quality services possible,” said Tyler. “This is a business model that I really embrace, from the range of services to the fair billing rates. The founders of Adams Harris clearly understand what it takes to build a successful business, and I am pleased to be a part of this exciting, new opportunity. I look forward to building a motivated, skillful and successful team that will meet and exceed the needs of our Houston clients,” added Tyler.

“I believe Tracy is a great choice to lead and expand our Houston operation,” said Adams Harris co-founder and Chief Operating Officer, Rob Dennison. “She knows what it takes to identify client needs and exceed client expectations. She has excellent management skills and is a natural leader,” said Dennison.

Harris is no stranger to start-up and high growth companies. Adams Harris is his fifth professional services start-up since 1995. He is best known as the founder and former CEO of Jefferson Wells, which was sold to Manpower in 2001. He also started and sold Capital H Group, and co-founded SilverTrain and Novo Recruiting, where he continues to be active and serves on the Board of Directors. Dennison is also a former Jefferson Wells executive with significant internal auditing experience and leadership.
